

LATEST UPDATES

The Hume Coal project is continuing to progress through the NSW planning process. We are currently working through all the submissions which were provided to NSW Planning during the EIS exhibition phase. We will then prepare a response to the issues raised in these submissions. This step in the planning process is referred to as Response to Submissions, or RtS, and can take up to several months. The responses will then be provided to NSW Planning as well as being made publically available online.

Once again, we are grateful to all those who took the time to make a submission on the Hume Coal project. The comments made by individuals, community and interest groups and organisations throughout this process will ensure the best possible project is designed for the Southern Highlands.

We will continue to work with all members of the community as we progress through the planning process, and if approved look forward to developing a successful and sustainable project for our local community.
